

When the State of Indiana first began it's do not call list I was rather surprised at how quickly the number of solicitation phone calls ceased coming to my home. My family and I highly value our free time and were extremely tired of the constant intrusion of unwanted and un-needed phone calls. The Indiana Do not call list has been and should CONTINUE to be allowed to continue in it's current form to help maintain my current quality of life. There is no legitimate reason for the Federal government to diminish a working and respected State implemented legislation that I a registered US Citizen who does VOTE would like to see maintained.

If the Federal Government would like to improve the quality of communication for it's citizens it may want to look into further ways for CITIZENS to stop unwanted intrusions into our mailboxes and e-mail in boxes. Government should work for the PEOPLE, not big business. If big business has a better mouse trap that they feel I should look at or purchase they have a number of methods for getting my attention. (Television, papers and periodicals, etc). Ultimately if I want to purchase a product or service the decision to look for a product or service should be at MY whim, not some telemarketers.
